FARMINGTON'S TOWN MANAGER. Having by a vote of its people declared for a town manager to take the place of the government which had previously existed there, the town ington is bound to be watched with greater interest than ever, not only in this state, but in this part of country, for it has set out on an ment which interests every town such statements as were made at the town meeting in setting forth the existing condition of affairs and advantages which would be gained by the change it became apparent that there was need of improvement and likely to replace the former slipshod methods with a businesslike adminstration of the town affairs. This is what every town is anxious have and it remains to be seen whether Farmington's town manager plan, patterned after the idea which of course on a much smaller scale, works out as expected. The selectmen ave agreed to turn in their salaries such an official and in addition to s salary of $1,500 which has been propriated for him he will be fur-shed a bookkeeper at a cost of $300. The selectmen are to name the man-ager and the responsibility of the plan efore rests to a large degree upon he selection which they make,

Farmington will not be able to wipe out its indebtedness in a short time, but it means a start towards the wiping out of loose methods and if the idea proves a success it is likely that t will become a permanent thing in that town. Farmington will be the dog for the rest of the Connecticut

That the use of the signals carried by automobilists for warning other users of the highway amounts in many cases only to the abuse of the public must be admitted, but it is nevertheless something which cannot be done away with and insure safety. All drivers of autos do not make a nuisance of their horns any more than all automobile operators are reckiess and disrespectful of regulations and it would never do to remove the provision for safety for the sake of correcting the abuse by the few. It would be far abuse by the few. It would be far better to tackle the trouble in another

Considering the lack of regard for the rights of others by certain auto drivers who think they should not be halted for a second in their mad rush which invariably is nothing more than a disposition to show off, it is difficult to imagine anything that would make them more cautious except a proper enforcement of the law, since the abolishment of the horns would be looked upon as a license to do about as they pleased. now we have a mriti-billion war, but most of us have never grasped the billion dollar thought. Uncle Sam says a thousand millions make a billion; but John Bull says it takes a million millions to do it. Can you imagine what a difference of opinion makes in computing expenses? Someone has given us the billion dollar thought in this way: "There haven't been a billion minutes since the birth of Christ." This is Uncle Sam's billion, and it is so. It will take ten years to count Uncle Sam's billion if you count a dollar a second sight hours a day and rest Sundays. It would take a workman at $500 a year $2,000,000 years to earn it. With a tax of $100 a year, it would take a million workmen 20 years would take a million workmen 20 years to pay a billion dollars. The billion dollar thought shows how royalty to play the role of petty tyrants. They are usually weak-minded persons whom a little feeling of consequence or a little authority make much. They be a dangerous thing, but an error of opinion concerning authority is a reaperil. It was Franklin who taugh had sworn to uphold and defend the neutrality of that country in common with the other powers, but no such action was taken relative to Greece's neutrality, so that the entire conduct of the allies in sending assistance to stave off the crushing of Servia presents an entirely different phase than the Belgium case. The situation in Greece is much nearer that of the crossing of Luxemburg by the Germans, which duchy agreed to it because it was unable to do anything else.

What is being done in Greece by the allies likewise presents a decided contrast to the record which is chalked up against Germany after it made up the results and property. Germany is not increasing the results but it despiting her replied that he thanked God, at least, the results and property. Germany is not increasing the results and property. Germany is not increasing the results and property. Germany is not increasing the results but it despiting her replied that he thanked God, at least, the results and property. Germany is not increasing the results but it despiting her replied that he thanked God, at least, the results and property. and property. Germany is not increas-ing her wealth, but is depleting her working energy and her wealth every day. This is true of every other fighting nation. When wealth is being de-stroyed at the rate of millions each day what a falsehood it is to pretend the financial resources cannot be exhaust-ed. Several of these nations are well-nigh bankrupt now.

Here is a cute little piece of deception the late Elbert Hubbard put out, and it took: "Emerson said that if a man made a better mousetrap than anybody else the world would make a beaten path to his door, although he lived in a wilderness." This has been quoted as Emersonian for years, and is ever likely to be, for it is worthy of that great master. The fact that this was never written by Emerson has constantly been in print; but the truth has never been able to check the persistent affirmation of untruth attached to a real gem of apparent gospel. To do any one thing better than it was ever done before is to become distinguished, and to be sought out by men. ever done before is to become distinguished, and to be sought out by men. This was done by the Fra to demonstrate a possibility, and it has been referred to as a joke and also as an example of wickedness; but since the sentiment is worthy of the writer to whom it is attributed, and also the truth, there is no malice in the false pretense and no evil results from it. As a misleading fluke it seems to have immortal life.

Hundreds of country lines benefit by this change of heart. Wise landlords have their hosteiries fitted with medern heating systems, rooms are as ern heating systems, rooms are as cosy as in any city home; the long, inviting living-room has its cheerful big log blaxing back of the colonial and-irons, there are sleepy-hollow chairs, cushioned settles, card tables, plenty of up to date reading matter, perhaps a glass-enclosed veranda giving on the sea, or the rolling fields. At night, an orchestra plays for dancing, perhaps.

No wonder the city visitor is tempted to delay his departure homeward, to linger while the woods are glorious with the tints of Autumn!
